Mr. Begin reiterated his refusal to return the northern Sinai town of El Arish and Mount Sinai to Egyptian control as a one-sided gesture of goodwill. "We shall not make any presents, not a single grain of sand," Mr. Begin said.

But he pledged willingness to meet Egyptian President Anwar Sa-dat to discuss mutual concessions. If Mr. Sadat agrees to the meeting we shall propose to him a certain offer in exchange for El Arish and

Russian Forced To Spy for U.S., Magazine Says

NEW YORK, July 24 (AP) - A Soviet citizen sentenced to death July 14 after confessing that be was blackmailed into spying bad worked for the U.S. government, Newsweek magazine says.

Anatoli Filatov, 38, admitted that he was recruited by a Western intelligence agency when be was a low-level diplomat in Algeria in 1974, and used in Moscow, but the Soviet press never named the agency, although there were strong hints at the trial that it was the CIA. Newsweek said in its coming issue that intelligence sources believe that Mr. Filatov's primary value to the CIA was his potential for rising within the Soviet diplomatic ranks. Mr. Filatov said be was photographed in a compromising posi-dun with a female companion. The magazine said he was then forced to spy for Washington and was given sums of money and code pads, invisible writing paraphernalia, a radio receiver and a miniature camera disgused as a butane lighter.

The Russian's main contact, according to the magazine, was a Vin-cent Crockett, apparently a CIA agent, who was listed by the U.S. Embassy as an archivist in the office of Maj. Robert Watters of the Defense Intelligence Agency. Mr. Crockett's activities ultimately were discovered by Soviet officials, and be and his wife were expelled from Moscow and reassigned to Bonn, Newsweek said.

Mount Sinai)," he said.

Such an agreement, Mr. Begin said, would establish good relations in a certain sector. From this we could advance to other sectors. This could be construed as a reference to achieving a de facto peace without a treaty.

The Knesset supported the government's Middle East policy by 68 votes to 37. Mr. Begin's address dissolved at one point into a frantic shouting match with members of the Labor Party opposition who called for his resignation. "It's not fair, it's not fair, you won't let me speak," Mr. Begin cried.

He complained about the Labor Party attacks on him in the last week, during which opposition members had questioned his mental and physical health. Assails Peres

At one point Mr. Begin shouted at Labor Party leader Shimon Peres, "Shut up and be quiet." The two party leaders argued over whether Mr. Begin had authorized Mr. Peres to conduct negotiations with President Sadat at their July 9 meeting in Austria.

Mr. Begin told Mr. Peres: "I am prepared to take a polygraph [lie detector] test to see who is telling

Earlier in the debate Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan said that Egypt was insisting on the removal of every Israeli soldier and Jewish settler from the West Bank as the price of a peace agreement.

He told the Knesset that neither Israel nor Egypt had modified their basic policies at last week's meeting of foreign ministers at Leeds Castle, southern England.

Mr. Dayan said that, contrary to recent reports, Egypt showed no sign of favoring the opposition Labor Party's call for a territorial compromise - meaning partial Israeli withdrawal from the West Bank and Gaza.

Official sources here saw a marginal advance in the Israeli position as presented by Mr. Dayan to U.S. Secretary of State Cyrus Vance at Leeds Castle, Mr. Dayan told the Knesset that he made these three

Bonn Takes Hard Line On Money

By Paul Lewis

BRUSSELS, July 24 (NYT) — West Germany made it clear today that it expects other countries join-ing its proposed new European currency stabilization plan to adopt conservatively inclined policies that will tend to lower their economic growth rates while also reducing

West Germany's stance, taken at a meeting of finance ministers from the nine European Economic Community countries, tends to confirm the Carter administration's fears that this new currency stabilization plan may contain a deflationary bias that could undercut the commitment to faster economic growth Western leaders gave at the Bonn summit meeting 10 days ago.

After today's meeting, European finance ministers said they had made good progress in their exami-nation of the French-German plan for creating "a zone of monetary stability" in Europe, which, if real-ized, could have important implications for the U.S. economy and the

But there was a widespread feeling among those close to the talks that the real political fighting has not yet begun - and probably will not until the end of September, when experts are due to report on technical aspects of the plan, referred to them by ministers today.

OPEC Weighs Price-Standard Shift

LONDON, July 24 (AP-DJ) — The dollar plunged to a record low against the yen today while weakening substandally against Europe-an currencies in hectic trading as gold prices soared.

Dealers said a widespread movement away from the dollar started after a disclosure by Kuwait's oil minister, Ali Kalifah al-Sabah, that a committee of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries had decided to recommend that the dollar price of oil be indexed to an undisclosed composite currency

The OPEC recommendation, which has yet to be approved by ministers, was interpreted as meaning that the dollar price of oil would automatically be raised if the dollar continued to decline. This development apparently caught the imagination of operators in Asia, who sold dollars in large amounts for yen. Even though the Bank of Japan absorbed between an estimated $400 million and $500 million, the dollar fell fixing and was 20 cents below that level at the close. Nevertheless, the price was within easy striking distance of the record high of $197.50 set in 1974. European currencies were influenced by the dollar's decline against the yen. The dollar fell to 2.0410 Deutsche marks from 2.0525 and to a record low 1.7720 Swiss francs from 1.7915. The dol-lar was also weak against the French franc and sterling, whose short-term deposit rates are considerably higher than dollar deposit rates. Thus, the dollar fell to 4.3935 French franes from 4.4275 while sterling rose to $1.9290 from $1.9135. Although dealers pinpointed the OPEC oil-pricing recommendation as the immediate eause of today's heavy sales of dollars, dealers also listed several other reasons to account for the weakness. One of them was Friday's report of U.S.

gross national product data, which showed that the general level of prices was rising at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 10 percent in the second quarter, compared with 7.2 percent in the first quarter. Dealers reckoned that if inflation continues at such a fast pace, there will be little hope for the United States to reduce its current-account deficit for trade in goods and ser-

BONN, July 24 (NYT) — The outcome of the Western economic conference has been widely, and accurately, portrayed as a personal victory for its host, Chancellor Hel-mut Schmidt. But his victory has a significance extending far beyond the economic sphere. It is another sign that 30 years after losing World War II. West Germany is finally acquiring the diplomatic muscle to match its economic strength.

The changing balance of power in the Western world was the deeper theme running through the talks in Beethoven's Rhineland birthplace. Mr. Schmidt faced what he saw as a choice between dissipating West Germany's economic vigor, or reinforcing its position as Europe's paymaster, with all the added power and influence that implies. He chose the latter course.

President Carter and other Western leaders wanted him to expand the German economy faster than he considered prudent, sucking in more imports, boosting world trade but risking renewed inflation. Mr. Schmidt refused to do this, offering only a modest stimulus dictated as much hy domestic political calculations as by any belief that it will significantly affect the course of the German economy. Instead, he had already chosen to spend Germany's trade surplus — the fruit of its economic strength on financing the further unification of Europe and increasing his country's diplomatic authority within

Europe and abroad.
Once Mr. Schmidt had made his decision. President Carter, and the heads of state of France, Britain, Italy. Canada and Japan, were obliged to fall into line and accept the German view that a period of financial stability is more likely to revive economic growth and reduce unemployment in the West than additional pump-priming. As a result, the nature of Western economic summitry bas changed. No longer can these seven leaders pretend that their annual conclaves are capable of producing some magic plan for instantly res-toring full employment and vigorous growth. The most to be expected from their meetings from now on will be a general display of determination to steer as best they can in what are acknowledged to be dangerous and protracted econom-

The key to understanding the sig-nificance of Mr. Schmidt's success at Bonn lies in the meeting of Common Market leaders two weeks earlier in Bremen. There, West Germany, with strong French backing, won acceptance in principle for a plan to bind Europe's currencies in a "zone of monetary stability" in-tended to shield them from the

Greater Individualism

Mr. Schmidt's stance is only the most recent example of Germany's greater individualism. He took the lead in telling the United States early in the Carter admin-istration that Germany intended to go ahead with the development of a plutonium-based nuclear industry, despite Mr. Carter's objections. It is an open secret, too, that he was appalled when the Carter administration appeared ready to give up the neutron bomb without Soviet concessions in return.

Politically, West Germany still cannot afford to offer direct military belp to pro-Western African countries who consider themselves menaced by Soviet-backed subversion. But it has fully supported France's forward policy in hlack Africa and is also stepping up its economic aid to strategically placed countries, such as Zambia and Zaire.

Yet internally, Mr. Schmidt is far from strong.

As summit host, it was clear that he would have to give some ground on expanding the German econo-my, whose growth this year will be 3 percent or less. Unemployment, however, is only 1 million and inflation is moving below 3 percent in a country whose leaders still remember the great inflation that helped Hitler to power. But the clinching factor in the modest stimulus Mr. Schmidt offered at Bonn — I percent of the country's gross national product or about $6 billion — was the abysmal showing that the Social Democrat's small but crucial government partner, the Free Democratic Party, made in recent provincial elections in Hannover and Lower Saxony.

In a desperate attempt to give it-self a clearer identity with the electorate, the party joined the opposi-tion Christian Democrats in calling for a $5 billion to $7 billion stimu-lus package, thus effectively black-mailing Mr. Schmidt's Social Dem-

Mr. Vance, officials said, did not specifically refer to the idea, but in and Mr. Warnke the issue was more fully discussed. The Russian negotiator's primary concern, they said, was that under the shell game approach, the Soviet Union would encounter great difficulties in counting U.S. missiles.

Pentagon officials are concerned that Moscow is committed to banning mobile missiles in a new agreement. Officials in other agencies, bowever, said they were less alarmed by Mr. Semyonov's com-ments and voiced optimism that Moscow might ultimately be prepared to accept some type of mo-bile missile deployment.

The deployment of mobile missiles is banned in a three-year protocol now being negotiated by the two sides, but not in the longerterm treaty, which would run until 1985 and limit overall numbers of missiles and bombers. But to ease the job of verifying compliance, the treaty does contain restrictions on the construction of new missile silos, a limitation that has led officials to worry that the shell-game idea might be prohibit-Rather than restrict numbers of arms agreement this year remained good. One reason, they said, is that the two sides have made progress on another unresolved issue in the talks - the question of what new missiles, both mobile and stationary, each side could deploy under a new treaty. During his sessinn with Mr. Gromyko, Mr. Vance is said to bave proposed that both sides be allowed to test, but not deploy, one new land-based missile until 1985.

The pilot and co-pilot were killed when a British Air Force Phantom jet crashed today near the town of Hoexter, in northern West Germany.

The United States could, the officials said, develop the proposed Mx missile and could deploy it after the proposed treaty expired.

Mr. Gromyko is sald to have rejected this proposal on the ground that Moscow is nearly ready to dethe session between Mr. Semyonov ploy a new missile while the American Mx is still on the drawing boards. He offered as a counterprosal willingness to accept an earlier U.S. proposal on new missile deployment if Washington accepted Moscow's position on other issues still in dispute. These included what restrictions are to be placed on the Soviet bomber known as the Backfire. The earlier U.S. proposal was that both sides could test and deploy one new land-based missile during the treaty, with or without multiple warbeads.

Carter's Foreign-Aid Bills Facing Tests

WASHINGTON, July 24 (WP)
— Election years traditionally spell trouble for foreign-aid bills in Congress, since they are measures whose constituency does not vote. But this year those troubles have

U.S. Firm Suspends Soviet Trade Talks

By Jim Hoagland

WASHINGTON, July 24 (WP) - International Harvester Co. has suspended trade negotiations with the Soviet Union and is asking other U.S. corporations to send protests to the Kremlin in a campaign to secure the freedom of a Harvester employee facing trial oo currency violation charges. At least two other U.S. multinational corporations trading with the Soviet Union bave responded to a confidential Harvester appeal and have sent protest messages to the Soviet government. About 20 U.S. firms and the International Chamber of Commerce have reportedly received requests for support from the Chicago-based equipment manufacturing company. Harvesier is not asking any other company to follow it in suspending business activity with the Russians as a way of obtaining the freedom of Jay Crawford, who was arrested June 17 and held for 15 days before being released in the custody of U.S. Ambassador Malcolm Toon to

But the campaign to build a front of protest by U.S. companies marks an embryonic, potentially significant shift.

Intense Debate Expected

. Until now, the U.S. business community has determinedly sought to keep Soviet trade insulated from swings in U.S.-Soviet political relations. Harvester's move is certain to be debated intensely by business groups that have large in-terests in U.S.-Soviet trade.

· That debate will be carried out in part in private meetings of businessmen now being called to discuss not only the Crawford case, but also President Carter's decision last week to cancel the sale of a high-technology computer to the Russians and other actions that have drawn trade into the policy debate on detente. The White House and the Kremlin are being hlamed by business groups for this unwelcome development.

The political overtones to the international Harvester appeal were in evidence at a meeting last Monday at the State Department between Harvester Chairman Brooke McCormick and Deputy Secretary of State Warren Christopher. Jesus' Image on Tortilla Draws 'Pilgrims' in U.S.

By Nicholas C. Chriss

 A small, weather-beaten green stucco house on the edge of this dusty farm hamlet in southern New Mexico has become a shrine of sorts to many persons since a morning last October.

It was when Maria Rubio was rolling a tortilla, a thin round cake of unleavened flour or corn usually eateo with a meat or cheese filling, that she "noticed something which looked like a face."

A striking pattern of fine skillet burns appeared oo the edge of the flour tortilla, and, Mrs. Rubio said in an interview, she had stood there looking at it, "feeling chills in my body."

What she saw, she said, was an image of the face of Jesus Christ, in the elassic, mournful romantic pose of the "shroud of Turin," with a wreath of thorns on the head and shoulder-length hair.

New York Visitors

Since that day, more than 8,000 Since that day, more man o, our persons have visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. Eduardo Rubio, where the wafer-size image is now enclosed in a glass case. Some of the visitors, the family reported, came to laugh but stayed to pray, Some were unbelleving. Some were amused. But the family said that al-most all of the visitors had been impressed by the image. They still come, almost daily, mostly from New Mexico but also from New York, Michigan, California and

Mrs. Rubio and her family call the image "Jesus oo a tortilla," and its story has spread slowly across the country, mainly among Hispanic persons. Almost all the names of the guestbooks signed by visitors are Hispanic.

Tortillas are a mainstay in the diet of the poor Mexican-Ameri-cans who inhabit this dusty, hot-area, working as farm laborers. Mr. Rubio sometimes has been a migrant worker, going to Kansas with

The tortilla with the image has not deteriorated, to the surprise of the Rubios, who say that tortillas usually do not last longer than five or six days before they fall apart. And what appears to be a picture of the bead of Christ is clearly visi-ble and uncannily like many romanticized portraits of Christ.

Mrs. Rubio said that word of the "Jesus on a tortilla" had spread throughout the area about 200 miles south of Albuquerque, and in the first few days several hundred persons a day had come to see it.

After she noted the face, Mrs. Rubio said, "I took the tortilla to church the next day," referring to the Our Lady of Guadalupe Mission across the street. The priest, the Rev. Joyce Finnigan, was not there, because he serves several Catholic missions. But Mrs. Rubio finally found him at the mission in Dexter, 17 miles away.

The priest cautioned her that it was simply an accident or coincidence, but he reluctantly agreed to bless the tortilla for Mrs. Rubio anyway."I know it was no accident. It was my miracle," she said. "Since Mrs. Rubio came to me," the priest said. "I've fried a lot of tortillas, and I've found that if you do it often enough you'll get a lot of things.

Caution From Archbishop

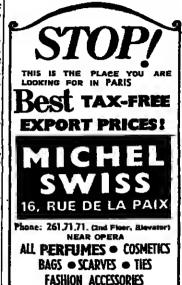

Archbishop Robert Sanchez said, "The Archdiocese of Santa Fe canoot, at this time, encourage devo-tion at this site and advises all to proceed with caution."

Mrs. Rubio speaks no English and has never bad any formal education. The family's income is about $6,000 a year. The family charges no fees to the visitors who come to see "Jesus on a tortilla." but it has received donations to build a small shrine in the back of LAKE ARTHUR, N.M., July 24 the house. "The archbishop said. however, that we could not do this." Mrs. Rubio said. So they have added a small room to their house, decorated with holy pic-tures, flowers and burning candles, where the image is kept.

She said that the image had made some changes in the Rubios' life. For one thing, they all go to church oow, she said, and her husband, who was a heavy drinker, no longer drinks.

WASHINGTON, July 24 (IHT) - Many plant and animal species will disappear by the end of the century if current development patterns persist, according to a Worldwatch Institute study by Erick Eckholm. The world loss of species poses a major ecological and social chal-lenge which, if not met in the near future, could "change the nature of life on this planet for all time," Mr. Eckholm said. The report predicts large-scale extinction for species in the biologically rich, scientifically uncharted tropical zones of Africa, Asia and Latin America. Booming popula-tions, inequitable development patterns and international demands for tropical products are forcing rapid clearance of rain forests, dooming unknown numbers of plants and animals.

Increasing Threat

Throughout the rest of the world, the destruction of natural habitats by pollution, agricultural growth and population overcrowding is an increasing threat to plant and animal life. In fact, Mr. Eckholm said that the overriding conservation need must be the protection of as many varied habitats as possible. He stressed that the preservation of habitats is essential not only to insure survival of existing species but to enable scientists to tap yet undiscovered species. Only a frac-tion of the earth's plant species has been screened for medical ingredients. A Harvard botanist said the mid-twentieth century discovery of "wonder drugs" from natural sources clearly shows that the plant kingdom represents a virtually untapped reservoir of new chemical compounds. Mr. Eckholm added that it is important to realize that "plants and animals serve a variety of crucial was industrial, medical and scientific tags.

purposes. In an age of plastics and moon shots, few people appreciate the extent to which humans remain dependent oo natural products." Aside from the irreversible loss to science, the disappearance of species also indicates "how well we manage our environment," according to ecologist Lee Talbot. For example, the plight of the snail darter signals the loss of the last free-flowing river in the Tennessee

The disappearance of fish from New England lakes points ont the high level of toxic chemical pollution in that region.

come a moment in that country's bloody civil war when all the parties would rather talk than fight. This week, congressional critics of that approach will make a major effort to force a change. They are tragically misguid-ed. Their prescription is likely only to prolong the war and to assure that whatever black regime eventually comes to power will be militantly anti-U.S. in a country from which whites have fled, its infrastructure

The challenge is led by Sen. Jesse Helms of North Carolina and other influential Republican conservatives. They argue that since the "internal settlement" devised last March by Prime Minister Ian Smith will lead to a black government, the United States should accept it and cease to obey the United Nations trade sanctions that were meant to bring blacks to power. Sen. Helms wants to amend the foreign aid bill to require just that.

The trouble with this approach is that the internal settlement — fashioned under the pressure of intensified war — came too late. A few years ago Rhodesian blacks might have welcomed a scheme that gave them po-litical office even though it left control of the country's economy and public service in white hands. Even Joshua Nkomo and Rob-ert Mugabe, the rival leaders of the Patriotic Front guerrillas, might then have settled on that basis. But now they won't and neither, apparently, will their many followers among Rhodesian blacks. The Smith regime's hold on the country is visibly slipping.

Lifting sanctions and endorsing the internal settlement now would end all remaining hope of bringing all black factions into an agreement to submit to elections supervised by the United Nations. That is the essence of the British-U.S. proposal that has been held out over the past year as the only way to end a destructive civil war. To abandon the idea

U.S. policy in Rhodesia has hung for a year on the slender hope that there would yet minority of 3 percent to try to tough it out minority of 3 percent to try to tough it out without further concessions. And it would persuade the guerrilla leaders and the leaders of neighboring African states that the West will hold out for genuine majority rule in Rhodesia. The overwhelming odds are that the guerrillas and "front-line" neighboring states would then accelerate the war, perhaps with Soviet and Cuban support, and that eventually - they would win. But their "victory" would leave the new state of Zimbabwe a shambles. And U.S. policy in Africa would be left bankrupt, having backed not only the wrong side but the losing side.

Not much better than Sen. Helm's approach is a compromise amendment, put forward by Sen. Clifford Case of New Jersey and Sen. Jacob Javits of New York. It would require the president to lift sanctions once he determines that there is in Rhodesia an elected government willing to negotiate with its enemies. Reasonable as this sounds, it is no solution. In the absence of an outside supervisory force, no credible elections can be held; the existing security forces can hardly be trusted to let their enemies stand for office — and perhaps win. And even if fairly run, the elections would choose a government committed by Mr. Smith's internal settlement to reserve real power for the white com-munity. There would be no way for blacks to express disapproval of that settlement.

The right course for Congress is to leave the administration free to observe the sanctions while pressing for a fair and impartial transition to true majority rule. That approach has understandably little appeal for Americans, who do not like standing by while a cruel war escalates. If reason is to fail in Rhodesia, as it may well have failed already, let it at least be clear that the United States tried to do right. Having brought his country to this tragic pass, Mr. Smith has no claim on U.S. policy or sympathy.

Lift Turkish Arms Embargo

Jimmy Carter was right on the mark when he said the forthcoming Senate vote to lift the Turkish arms embargo is the most important piece of foreign affairs business the Congress has left in this session. It's really quite simple. If the embargo is lifted, diplomacy gets a chance to start healing the wounds in Cyprus, the rent in Turkish-Greek relations, the strain in Turkish-U.S. and Greek-U.S. relations, and NATO's whole sorry disarray in the eastern Mediterranean. If the embargo stays on, everything gets

The argument has been cast in pro-Turkish and pro-Greek terms, but that is misleading. There is a great deal in it for both Turkey and Greece, and for both Turkish and Greek communities on Cyprus, if the stalemate signified by the embargo is broken. The United States has gone to considerable lengths to make that case, explaining the vista that lifting of the embargo would open, removing the previous administration's pro-Turkish tilt in military aid, and supporting Greece's wish not to be muscled by Turkey in the Aegean Sea dispute. The administration has also labored, successfully, to induce the Turks to offer a new Cyprus position conducive to negotiations. Ankara's position is not yet what Athens and the Greek Cypriots want it to be. The way to improve it is by the talks that would surely follow a lifting of the McGovern. embargo.

The Greek lobby is hanging tough. That has led Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., to offer an imaginative way out. Mr. McGovern can hardly be describe as someone dominated by the strategic concerns that, for good reason, guide the views of many others who wish to end the embargo. He is sympathetic to the division and hardship on Cyprus. Mr. McGovern suggests lifting the embargo, while linking future Turkish aid requests (including arms sales) to a presidential certification of good-faith diplomacy. His amendment is designed to eliminate the stigma that the embargo is for Turkey, but to retain a nonhumiliating form of encouragement to the Turks to continue moderating their policy. The administration supports this

Let us underline the essential point. The embargo was at its outset a well-meant ly mandated protest against the use of U.S. arms for the occupation of almost half of Cyprus. But experience has proven it to be destructive of the purpose it was meant to serve - reducing the occupation - and of much else. The embargo stands now simply as a hostile act against an ally, and one not in the slightest endorsed by any other NATO ally - except for Greece. The Senate should end it in the manner suggested by Mr.

Open Doors for Indochinese

The Carter administration has recently taken two important steps toward fulfilling the nation's obligation to the refugees from Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia. It will admit 25.000 more refugees before next May under the president's "parole" authority, raising to 197,000 the total number authorized to enter the United States since the fall of Saigon in 1975. To date, 164,000 have arrived. In addition, the State Department has declared that refugees plucked from boats at sea by U.S. vessels will be admitted to the United States if they find no other sanctuary. The purpose is to set an example that might end the cruel refusal of many ships — in violation of law and decency — to pick up Vietnamese boat people because no one will receive them ashore.

Even this, however, seems inadequate. The number of Vietnamese reaching a foreign port increased from 1,500 a month in January and February to almost 5,000 a month between March and June. The total for this year may reach 35,000, of whom only 12,500 will qualify for the new U.S. quota of 25,000 esablished for all Indochinese. The other 12.500 will come from among Laotians and Cambodians escaping to Thailand, where more than 100,000 have gathered even though many are being turned back by the

The United States clearly will have to provide for still more to enter while urgent pleas to admit refugees are addressed to other prosperous nations. Cambodians will need special consideration, because few can qualify under the priority given by the State Department to refugees with close kin in the United States or a record of service to the U.S. government. The dispossessed of Southeast Asia, uprooted by war and revolution, are still in desperate straits.

China: A Balance of Terror

By Donald Kirk

ailors and airmen.

NEW YORK — The prospect of opening full diplomanc rela-tions with the People's Republic of China rests on the familiar strategy of striking a balance of terror.

In this instance, however, achieving a balance is considerably more complicated than one might infer from the much-publicized conten-tion that the United States play "the China card" against the Soviet Union. The delicate balance is also dependent on a less-publicized effort 10 ensure the military needs of both the Communist regime on the Chinese mainland and the anti-Communist government of Taiwan. The delicate tug-of-war among U.S., Chinese and Taiwan officials (interrupted only hy aggrieved warnings from the Kremlin) could turn into an arms race - like those between the Arabs and Israelis, and the Greeks and Turks — in which the U.S. supplies both sides with vi-tal equipment.

Belated Drive

One underlying issue is Peking's desperate need for sophisticated U.S. technology — or at least for Washington's acquiescence to China's purchase of advanced forms of mibtary hardware from West European allies. If China's leaders believe the United States will help them in their belated drive 10 begin catching up with the Russians, according to one theory, they may not object to the Re-public of China on Taiwan buying whatever it needs from the United States or other Western nations.

The compromise may be that neither China nor Taiwan buys U.S. arms but that both buy arms from Western Europe. Some analysts claim the Western nations could keep China and Taiwan from fighting each other by cutting off the arms flow in the event of a real threat of conflict. It is the same sort of wishful thinking propounded whenever Washington has fallen into the deadly trap of arming bitter enemies. Others argue that China would lose half its air force, including 4,000 or so ouldated MiG-17s, 19s and 21s, in a confrontation with Taiwan, while Soviet forces exploit that distraction to attack across the 4,500-mile Sino-Soviet fontier. Experts do not believe that China's navy, consisting of only a dozen or so destroyers and 66 submarines to accompany a few bundred landing craft, is big enough to send an army across the ehoppy Formosa Strait, 90 miles wide at the closest point. And even after a substantial buildup, China could bardly wage war on two distant fronts.

The arms-supplying Western na-tions might well discourage Taiwan from mounting a surprise attack on the China coast by providing tech-nology, as one Far Eastern specialist put it, "for defense against China but oot of offensive capability." In other words, the beirs to the leg-acy of the late Generalissimo Chiang Kai-sbek would have to aban-don their often-stated vow to return to the mainland.

Simple Enough

That provision seems simple since Taiwan's leaders, for all their declarations and promises. are much more concerned with developing their prospering industrial and mercantile economy than with waging a real war. If China and Taiwan seem unlikely to fight each other, however, the question re- whereas the Jews in the Soviet Unmains why Taiwan needs the right ion are still prevented from going to buy any Western military equipto live in Israel. After all, it was no ment at all. Local industry already coincidence that the Yom Kippur produces most of the basic infantry War was started on a day that used weapons and vehicles needed to to be set aside in the Soviet Union

A stock answer to the question is that Taiwan, assiduously supported by U.S. aid from World War II

onward, already faces a severe enough sbock in the form of U.S. "betrayal." The United States has long since indicated it would meet Peking's three basic "requirements" — withdrawal of the last few bundred U.S. military people from Taiwan, abrogation of the security pact hinding it and the United All the faces as pact binding it and the United States and transfer of formal recognition from Taiwan to Peking as the legitimate government of all China. Washington and Peking then could "normalize refitors" and elevate their "liaison offices" in each other's capitals to embassy status, all in accordance with the communique signed in Shanghai by President Richard M. Nixon and Premier Chou En-lai in February.

But in private, off-the-cuff remarks in Washington, President Carter is said to have alluded to three U.S. conditions: the right of Taiwan to purchase U.S. arms; a Chinese guarantee not to attack Taiwan; and Chinese agreement to the presence of an U.S. economic mission on Taiwan similar to the one Japan has maintained there for six years, since it opened diplomat-ic relations with Peking. The president let slip these conditions at a meeting of the Trilateral Commission, the top-level "study group" that Zbigniew Brzezinski ran until he became Carter's national secuity adviser last year. The president deliberately kept his comment off the record so that China would oot have to reject the condi-

John Dornberg From Munich:

Finally, the Filbinger affair has opened, somewhat belatedly, the Pandora's box of the whole innate immorality, illegitimacy and injustice of the Third Reich.

it would seem, have never been especially compatible.

Though it always poses somewhat of a dilemma, in the ultimate crunch, as history tends to demonstrate, a people tend to opt for the "my-country-right-or-wrong" and the analogous "you-can't-make-an-omelet-without-cracking-eggs" approach.

For West Germans, that dilemma — in historical retrospective — ma — in historical retrospective — has assumed a haunting and rather current poignancy during the past week or so.

There is, first of all, the still lingering, indeed escalating, case of Hans Filbinger, the Christian Democratic (CDU-SU) premier of Baden-Wuerttemberg, who until recently was being considered seriously by his party as the nominee to replace Walter Scheel next year as West Germany's president and head of state.

Under a Cloud

Filbinger, you may recall, came under a cloud earlier this year be-cause of his Third Reich and immediale postwar role as a German Novy court-martial officer in Norway where he was responsible for the execution of one sailor on an attempted desertion charge and where, three weeks after VE-Day, while part of the administration in a British POW camp, he sentenced a soldier to six months' imprisonment for tearing the Nazi insignia off his uniform and calling superior officers "Nazi dogs."

The cloud, meanwhile, has become darker and heavier as more disclosures of Filbinger's complicity in wartime death sentences and his postwar dispensation of harsh, Nazi-style justice have been dredged up.

He does not challenge the facts, which would be difficult considering that the dossiers and records can be found in archives and there are still witnesses around to attest to their veracity.
Instead, what has turned the matter into a political and moral conundrum is Filbinger's own in-terpretation of those facts and his penchant for saying, as new cases have been made public, that be had "forgotten about them."

As one of Filbinger's own party cronies, former Interior Minister Hermann Hoecherl, put it last week: "I cannot imagine how any-one could forget a death sentence has passed or an execution he has

Up until a few years ago, largely ecause of the pervasive wish and because of the pervasive wish and inclination to sweep the entire "recent past" under the carpet of history, that was treated largely as a nonevent. Maritime Officials of U.S. Accused by Congressman

By Charles Mohr

WASHINGTON, July 24 (NYT)

— Rep. Benjamin Rosenthal, D.

N.Y. has accused officials of the Maritime Administration of "plundering the United States Treasury" by creating, administer-ing and working closely with a mar-nime industry trade association. Rep. Rosenthal made the state-

Mr. Blackwell testified that 40 employees of the Maritime Administration spent some of their working time for the trade association and that $157,803 in federal salaries was devoted to the association's business last year as well as $12,886 in travel expenses. The Maritime Administration pays no dues to the council, but in effect acts as the council's staff.

Lewis Paine Jr., head of the Office of Market Development, is executive secretary of the trade association and in that role helped the council direct an advertising campaign last year and this year called "Don't Give Up the Ships."

Rep. Drinan said this constituted "grass-roots," or indirect, lobbying of Congress and may have consti-tuted a violation of the criminal code. Mr. Blackwell and Mr. Paine argued that it was not grass-roots lobbying because, although some ads urged readers to tell their conhow they felt at strong merchant marine, no specific legislation was mentioned

U.S. Study Finds Sweeteners Not Tied to Cancer

CHICAGO, July 24 (AP) — The moderate amounts of artificial sweeteners used by buman beings do not cause cancer, a major study in Baltimore has concluded.

The Baltimore study involved 519 patients with bladder cancer between 1972 and 1975. It also involved 519 other persons, who were matched for age, sex and other factors but did not have bladder can-

The government banned cyclamates in 1970 and saccharin in 1972 after studies of laboratory rats showed that dosages of the sweeteners — far in excess of those used by burnan beings - caused bladder cancer.

The Baltimore study, conducted by Dr. Irving Kessler, now of the University of Maryland School of Medicine, and Page Clark at Johns Hopkins University, contends that the relevance of animal tests to the problem of cancer development in rumans is unclear.

"Species and strains within species differ widely in their response in the same environmental agents," the two scientists said. They conclude in a report published in the July 28 issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association that the ingestion of artificial sweeteners, at least at moderate dictary levels, is not associated with an increased risk of bladder cancer.

"The bouses will probably be growing the better-known blue crab, rather than these rock crabs," he said. "The significance of the experiments with rock crabs now is that by careful observation, we can determine the best time to harvest them without depleting the stock."

He said that some of the grant money will go toward tagging and recapturing crabs to get an idea of the size of the crab population. Also, there is an effort to open up the market for the smaller rock crabs, bright red in appearance and lacking a back-fin muscle. Rock crabs live on the ocean floor at depths of up to several hundred

Dr. Rebach said that several local restaurants have tried rock crabs and that customer response has been good. Deep-trolling lobster potters out of Ocean City, Md., and Lewes, Del., are being advised to keep the rock crabs that clog their pots. Usually, the rock crabs are tossed overboard.

Blue-crab production in Maryland and along the Delaware River and bay estuaries has been declining, but demand has been increasing. This has put heavy pressure on the blue-crab fishery. Scientists are busy trying to determine the blue crab's movements and habits; hoping to find a better way to manage the resource.

If the rock-crab experiments succeed, crab farming may well become a stable industry in the tidewater region. Dr. Rebach said, just as chicken farming has in the last 50 years.

'New Biology' Outpaces Law, Ethics in Case of Test-Tube Baby

Any day now the birth of a baby in Britain is expected to confirm that the technology of how to create human life in a test tube has been perfected. The trouble is that the 'new biology," as it is called, has reached this point far ahead of social planning for it, of theological pronouncements, of government regu-

The fetus in the womb of Lesley Brown, 32, was started "in vitro" that is, in a test tube, the first authenticated case of an outside-thewomh fertilization. In the tube, sperm of Mrs. Brown's husband, Gilbert Brown, fertilized an egg removed from her through surgery. Four days later, the fertilized egg, — then about 100 cells — was inserted in her uterus and devel-oped as an egg fertilized "in utero" (in the uterus) would have.

Scientists had been trying to do that for several years and had had many failures. If this birth, to be by Caesarean section, produces a nor-mal baby, it would seem the techni-cal problems have been solved.

Legal, Moral Problems

But there remain the legal, moral, and ethical questions, according to scientists, theologians, social planners and experts in ethics. Some scientists say that they must wait to use this new technique until its implications for mankind can be defined and agreed upon.

The method used in the in-vitro fertilization involving the Browns was devised by Dr. Patrick Steptoe, whose ethics were endorsed this month by the central ethical committee of the British Medical Association as offering "no ethical difficulties for doctors . . . for treating infertile women

Columbia-Presbyterian Medical Center and its former chief of obstetrics and gynecology, Dr. Raymond Wiele mond Wiele.

Doris and John Del Zio claim that their incubating embryo was destroyed when a test-tube fertilization was ruined deliberately. Dr. Landrum Shettles, who was trying to help the Del Zios, later quit Columbia-Presbyterian. He claims that his work was interfered with, but the medical center says that Dr. Shettles failed to get permission for the human experimentation from the Committee on Human Reproduction. Technology used in test-tube fertilization is seen by some as bring-ing nearer the era of cloning and genetic fixes that can give babies any physical traits desired. The technology may make it possible for a woman to buy a frozen fertilized human egg, and have the thawed egg implanted in her womb by an obstetrician.

"You could even have women opting for material that would enable ber to produce a clone of Burt Reynolds," said Allen Utke, a chemist at the University of Wisconsin at Oshkosh.

Mr. Utke, who is on the Wiscon-Force on the Biological Revolution. has directed numerous seminars on the biological revolution.
"Unless we check the scope and slow the pace of the new biology," he said, "it will destroy society and bumankind aş we know it, probably by the next generation."

In a new book, "Bio-Babel," Mr.
Utke raises the question: "Can we survive the new biology?"

DARIS, July 24 (IHT) — Paris is by little this time. (Well, you've been longing for a change, haven't you?) Not only that, but the fullness, cause of many complaints, has gone out of fashion, though some of the softness remains. The silhouette stars with broad shoulders and narrows to a hem that is edging up to the knees again. The collections are full of black for both day and night with red and purple as standbys. The crowds at the collections are larger than they have been for years, with the pushing and shoving and demand for seats almost as strenuous as it is for the ready-towear. For Cardin's opening, the show almost outgrew the theater that Cardin has created for it in the converted old French night club that he now calls L'Espace Cardin.

The black dresses, though, are the beauties. Black silk coats, one rounded, cover black dresses with soft tops and narrow skirts. Models wear little fantasy hats of egrets sometimes veiled.

Also outstanding for evening the long slit tunics of colored lace over skinny black satin pants; the short, little dresses of lace over cotton jetsey: the prints cut in tatters; the oversized taffeta robes and on and on with a parade of half a dozen brides, one in a white satin jump suit, who opened and closed the Dior's collection this afternoon came as a surprise. Famous for his pretty romantic clothes, Marc Bohan changed his mind and turned out a harder-edged look this time. The world of expensive ladies who count heavily on Dior for their flowery chiffons will have a harder time finding something for the important dinners and benefit balls this time.

The mainstay of the new collec-tion is a narrow pants suit, usually black with a fabric belted jacket and a somewhat high collar with a gold chain at the base of the neck for decoration. Add a cear little hat, a scarf or two foxes looped un-der the chin and dangling down the front, sheer black nylons just showing beneath the pants and shoes with high heels as thin as knife blades and you have the new Dior

For evening, Marc Bohan likes the uneven bemline that starts at the knees in front and floats to the floor behind. His black models wear it in black chiffon, glitter-em-broidered and with long, sheet sleeves. Others are even more definite about the hemline, like the red chiffon with a strapless top that

OPEC Seen Adhering to The Dollar Solomon Says Switch

Could Hurt Trade WASHINGTON, July 24 (APDJ) — The United States has "no reason to believe" that Saudi Arabia or other key countries in the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries are ready to shift from the dollar to a basket of currencies for pricing oil exports. Treasury Undersecretary Anthony

Solomon said today. He added, in testimony before a Senate subcommittee, that if OPEC countries were to switch back and forth between the dollar and a basket of currencies, such action would be "highly irresponsible," and would be "demoralizing" to

Questioned about recent news reports from Kuwait that OPEC fi-nancial experts, at a recent meeting, favored the shift to a basket of currencies for pricing oil exports, Mr. Solomon replied that such a decision would have to be made not by OPEC experts, but at a high-level OPEC meeting. At that point, he commented that the United States has received no indications that the Saudi Arabians, for example, wanted to make that sort of a switch. Pressed for his comments on how the government would view a possihle switch by OPEC countries to a basket of currencies for pricing oil, he said that such a switch might have some "unfortunate" term effects and that the United States would not favor it. He added that such a switch probably would not have any major long-term implications.

On other questions, Mr. Solo-mon predicted that there will be a "substantial reduction" in the U.S. current-account deficit later this year and added that the situation will show further improvements in

· He also said that Washington hopes the Common Market plan for monetary stability will be designed to "promote economie growth in Europe and in the world as a whole." Noting that the it still is not known bow the EEC intends to coordinate exchange rate policies in "vis-a-vis the dollar," he said that the United States could not support a plan that would prevent the dollar exchange rate from responding to underlying economic and financial factors. He said that Washington also wants to be certain that any new arrangements agreed upon among the EEC countries would be administered "in full conformity" with the rules of the International Monetary Fund and in close consultation and cooperation with the monetary authorities of other countries.

Mr. Solomon also said he opposes capital controls or exchangerate guarantees as a way to counter fluctuations of the dollar. He criticized proposals to impose capital controls to restrict private use of the dollar and to have the IMF provide open-ended exchange rate guarantees for all present and fu-ture official balances. He repeated the administration position that dealing with the basic problem of inflation and the U.S. trade balance are the keys to the dollar's perform-

Soviet Output Increases 5.2% For First Half

MOSCOW, July 24 (AP-DJ) -Soviet industrial production in the first six months of the year in-creased 5.2 percent compared with the year-ago period, according to the central statistical board.

Growth in labor productivity ta-pered off, reaching 3.8 percent, below the 4.2 percent recorded in the Per share year-ago period.

Industrial production exceeded the 4.5-percent growth rate set for the half in the current five-year plan. However, some Western specialists have contended that the plan's target figures have been set artificially low, so that even modest increases in industrial production can be seen as overfulfilling the

Mikhail Korolev, first deputy chief of the statistical board, told a news conference: "If one estimates things in general, based on all the data that we possess, judging by the first 2½ years, there are all grounds to say the plan is being fulfilled successfully."

The statistics showed that in the first half of 1978, the foreign-trade turnover rose 6.8 percent from a year earlier to 34.3 hillion rubles (about $50.1 billion). Among the statistics was also a new estimate for the Soviet popula tion — 261.2 million as of July 1 1978. 2 Oil Companies Sign Gas Pact

With Abu Dhabi PARIS, July 24 (IHT) — Royal Dutch Shell Group and Cie. Francaise des Petroles announced today they have signed a $1.6 billion project with Abn Dhabi to collect, project with Abn Dhabi to collect, process and export gas gathered from onshore oilfields.

Under the 30-year agreement, state-owned Abu Dhabi National Oil Co, will put up 68 percent of the $400 million capital of the concern being set up to oversee the venture. Royal Dutch Shell and CFP will each have a 15 percent interest and Portugal's Participations and Explorations Corp. will hold 2 and Explorations Corp. will hold 2

Each of the companies involved in the project will receive a share of in the project will receive a share of products proportional to its participation. Industry sources said the project will recover over one billion cubic feet a day of gas which is at present burned off at the well-head to produce 114,000 barrels daily of propane and butane, and 71,000 barrels daily of natural gasoline.

German Money Supply

FRANKFURT, July 24 (AP-DJ)

— West Germany's widely defined money supply (M-3) rose by a seasonally adjusted 1 billion Deutsche marks in June, compared with a 7.2 billion DM rise in May and a 1.6 billion DM decline in June 1977.

The Bundeshape said in its month. The Bundesbank said in its monthly report on the money supply that in the last three months M-3 has grown at a seasonally adjusted rate of 8.8 percent, which exceeds original official goals of 8 percent.

policy that China should not accept

These developments suggest that prospects for Chinese-Japanese economic cooperation — which were already much brighter followconclusion of a $20-billion trade agreement early this year un-der which Chinese oil and raw materials would be traded for Japanese plant and technology - had progressed far beyond all expectations. During the first six months of this year, 50 Chinese missions visited Japan, compared to 73 in all of 1977 and 39 in 1976. The number of Japanese visiums to China meanwhile leaped from 8,000 in 1972, the year that diplomatic relations were established, to about 30,000 last year.

Economies Complementary

The overall pattern is determined the complementary character of the two economies: China has the labor and Japan has the technology. But it is too early to say what will happen. The Chinese-Japanese peace treaty has yet to be signed and it contains a troublesome "hegemony" clause that Japan has so far hesitated to accept because it implies hostility toward the Soviet Union.

In addition, Japanese companies cannot export arms. They can only supply China with items like trucks and vessels that the Chinese may use for naval purposes. Officially, it is none of Japan's business what China does with such purchases. In any event, there have been no detailed talks on arms-related deals between China and Japan, so far as is known, although a Tokyo newspaper, Sankei Shimbun, reported recently that China had ap-

There are other big Japanese deals in the air. Hitachi and Toshiha, a leading electrical company, are negotiating the sale to China of a color- television plant worth about $125 million, the companies confirmed last week. If a contract is concluded, this could become China's first color-television facibity. The same two companies are competing to supply a power stanon to Shanghai.

Basic Accord on Oil

TOKYO, July 24 (AP-DJ) -Japan and China have reached ha-sic agreement on joint development of oil resources in Pohai Bay in eastern China, the government-owned Japan National Oil Corp. said today.

Company officials also said the two nations had agreed to study the feasibility of joint development of oil resources at the mouth of the Chu Kfang River in sonth China. The agreements were made on the premise that the governments of both countries will support the projects, the officials added.

First Half Reaches 708 Million Francs

France's trade surplus rose to 459 million francs (about $104.3 million) in June, up from a seasonally adjusted surplus of 155 million francs in May and a deficit of 2.043 billion francs in the year-ago month, the Trade Ministry report-compared with a deficit of over billion francs incurred during the 1977 period. On an unadjusted basis, the ministry reported a June surplus of 2.518 hillion francs compared with deficit of 145 million frames in May and a deficit of 576 million francs in June last year. On this basis, the first-half performance showed a surplus of 884 million francs compared with a deficit of 8.97 hillion francs in the first six months of 1977.

Commenting on the figures, the ministry noted that although there had been a substantial decline in the cost of oil imports due to the depreciation of the dollar, "the seasonally adjusted surplus widened in June despite a persistent agricultur-al trade deficit and a relatively low level of auto exports." The ministry said that despite a rise in farm ex ports of 40 percent, France (which is traditionally a net exporter) had recorded a farm trade deficit of over 1.4 billion francs.

The ministry concluded that the positive results obtained so far this year reflects the strength of the franc, which allowed a marked slowdown in the cost of French

DEBT BURDEN BAROMETER

U.S. Consumer Debt Load Held Unaltered Since '63

NEW YORK, July 24 (AP-DJ) - ment debt is jumping - it rose a Contrary to the widely-held suppo-sition that Americans lately have near-record increases occurred in been taking on a dangerously burdensome amount of debt, their debt load, as the accompanying chart shows, was about as dangerous 15 years ago.

The chart — in effect, a gauge of the ability of consumers to carry debt — expresses repayments of principal and interest as a percentage of income after taxes, which bas risen steeply over the years. The statistics, supplied by Data Resources, an economic research company, were drawn from various sources and reflect home-mortgage as well as consumer in-stallment borrowing. The result shows that over a decade and a half the debt burden has hardly budged with one of every five after-tax dollars going to repay deht — similar to the 1963 level. The message is reassuring at a time of increasing concern that the pub-lic has grown severely overloaded with debt, a situation that could aggravate the economie slowdown that many forecasters anticipate late this year or next.

the increase, repayments amounted to 19.9 percent of after-tax income in the second quarter, the same rate as in the first quarter and a shade under last year's fourth-quarter level of 20.3 percent. The explana-tion lies in the fact that while installment-debt repayments climbed in the second quarter to 15.3 percent of income from 14.9 percent in the first quarter, mortgage deht repayments fell to 4.6 from 5 percent of income. The most burdensome period for installment debt was in 1969-70, subsequent months - but despite when repayments came to 15.9 percent of after-tax income, appreciahly higher than so far this year, The most burdensome period for mortgage debt was in 1963-65. In each of those years repayments reached 5.7 percent of after-tax income, well above the latest 4.6 percent. During the present decade, the rate has been as low as 2.9 percent (1970) and as high as 5.4 percent (1973).

A survey by Morgan Guaranty Trust concluded; "Some families are struggling to meet debt payments; others have little or no debt. Still, the great bulk of American families do not appear profligate in their spending or in their assumption of debt. Another analysis, by Sanford C.

Bernstein & Co., a New York securities firm, reached a similar con-clusion. "Our study...leads us to reject the argument that consumer spending is vulnerable to pressures emanating from a debt-service related retrenchment," it notes. In effect, the affordable amount, the chart indicates, is one that holds debt-servicing close to 20 percent of after-tax income, year-in and year-out Although the repayment burden has barely altered over 15 years, the rate of loan delinquencies bas run consistently at levels above those of 10 or 15 years ago. Some 3 percent installment loans were delinquent 30 days or more in 1975, near 617.70 54.68 the pit of the 1973-75 recession. Even now, after more than three years of economic expansion, the delinquency rate is about 2.5 percent — nearly twice as high as in 1963. Even in earlier recessions the 1,200 102.30 2.16 rate remained well below 2 percent,

- Continuing concern about inter-est rates and further weakness in the dollar pushed prices narrowly lower today on the New York Stock Exchange, Interest-rate concerns centered on forecasts by analysts that the prime rate will rise from its present percent level. There were also some expectations that the Treasury's quarterly refinancing this week will produce attractive yields. The Dow Jones industrial average fell 1.82 points to 831.60 and declines led advances 842 in 569. Volume fell to 23.3 million shares from Friday's 26.06 million. Shares of oil companies lost ground, even though a few reported improved second-quarter earnings. Texaco, the most active issue, gave up 1/2 to 25%. Exxon and Atlantic Riehfield lost fractions while Standard Oil of Indiana lost a point to 49%. Railroad issues were also in the

THE TENNECO RECORD:

Return on net assets employed rose to 16.3% in 1977

In 1977 Tenneco's return on net assets employed rose to a new high of 16.3%. This compares with 15.1% in 1976. Despite an increase in the average number of common shares outstanding from some 88 million to 93 million during the year, the return on average shareholders' equity declined only slightly from 15.4% in 1976 to 15.2% in 1977.

Our five-year chart indicates increasingly efficient use of resources. And again in 1977 we expanded our capital expenditures, allocating $714 million for facilities and improvements. About half of this investment was spent on the exploration for and development of natural gas and oil reserves.

The Company continued its policy of prudent diversification, acquiring Monroe Auto Equipment Company and 40% of Poclain of France. Our record results in revenues and earnings are attributable in large part, we believe, to our continued concentration on companies that serve people's basic needs, with special emphasis on critical priorities such as energy.

Credit Algerie Gets $60-Million Credit

PARIS, July 24 (Reuters) — redit Populaire d'Algerie has borrowed $60 million through a sevenyear credit bearing a 1% point spread over London interbank offered rates, sources at consortium leader Ste. Generale said today.

leader Ste. Generale said today.

In Luxembourg, banks said
Olivetti International is raising $40 million through a five-year credit with a spread of 1½ points over Libor. The credit, guaranteed by the parent Italian company, was raised from an originally planned $25 million due to rigenally $25 million due to strong demand.

MILAN - ITALY

Salient points in the 1977 Annual Report and Accounts adopted at the Annual General Meeting of Riunione Adriatica di Sicurtà, held on 12th July 1978 were:

· A considerable improvement in underwriting results in virtually all branches;

An asset base which fully reflects the E.E.C. requirements for solvency margins in insurance contpanies; An increase in technical reserves held as security for commitments to policyholdere; Premium income in the Company amounted to Lit. 331.7 bn. ($ 381 m.), represented as to 42% by business written in Italy and as to 58% by foreign insurance business and reinsurance; Premium income in the entire RAS Group, consisting of ninc insurance companies in Italy and twenty-two in other countries, rose by 16.5% to the equivalent of Lit. 1,182 bn. (8 1,356 in.). The Annual General Meeting approved a proposal to declare a di-vidend of Lit. 1,000 per share (1976: Lit. 800) payable as from 19th July 1978.

As Extraordinary Business, a proposal to increase the Company's share capital from Lit. 9.6 bn. to Lit. 19.2 bn. (8 23,029,718) was also approved on a scrip basis by increasing the par value of the 1,920,000 shares in circulation from Lit. 5,000 to Lit. 10,000.

SOLZHENITSYN AND THE SECRET CIRCLE By Olga Carlisle. Holt Rinehart and Winston. 228 pp. $835 Reviewed by Robert Kirsch

A LEXANDER Solzhenitsyn from the man she met in Mor accused Olga Carlisle, the to the bearded prophet on to the bearded prophet on the sion, glowering and serment painter he personally chose to over-see publication of "The First Circle" and "The Gulag Archipelago" of having delayed publication of the latter work, thus causing his exile from Russia.

Anger and righteousness are a powerful combination in the fight against a repressive government but they are an unseemly weapon against a responsible fellow writer who took great risks and spent a considerable portion of her life serving Solzhenitsyn's purposes. "I realized that as future scholars assembled the story of Solzhenitsyn and his emergence into world fame, I would appear in history to a footnote, as a day mercenary who was responsible for [his] expulsion from the Soviet Union" she writes.

What began as a service to litera-ture and freedom in Russia became a mean little squabble in which an over-righteous Solzhenitsyn sought a scapegoat for a breakdown in his strategy against the regime. He has already chastised Mrs. Carlisle for alleged inaccuracies in her account, and even "outright lies." As in most issues, the truth probably lies somewhere between the two poles. Frankly, in view of Solzhenitsyn's recent obsessive, self-righteous and sometimes downright megalomanic behavior, I am disposed to believe Mrs. Carlisle's version.

It is not only that her detailed account is persuasive but that Solzhenitsyn's charge is on the face of it irrational. Even if she were reof it urational. Even if she were re-sponsible for the delay (and I don't think she was), it seems unlikely that this single factor was the gold-en opportunity for the regime to oust Solzhenitsyn. I deeply respect Solzhenitsyn as a writer (though he is by no means the universal genius some have claimed him to be) and as an activist against repression, hut in this affair he has acted no differently from many a writer af-flicted by publishing paranoia. He doesn't deserve kid-glove treatment for his unjust and unchivalrous treatment of Mrs. Carlisle.

She still respects the other Solzhenitsyn, the artist, the zek who survived Gulag, the heroic fighter against the KGB, and speaks only with praise of his work. He chose her. She is a Paris-born Russian, granddaughter of a well-loved writer, Leonid Andreyev, wife of the novelist and literary agent Henry Carlisle, a translator of Pasternak; editor of an anthology of Russian poets. She was in Moscow in 1967 to find poems for this work when she met Solzhenitsyn. He asked to walk her back to her hotel. He had learned of ber back-ground and her husband's literary connections from a mutual friend, the critic and writer of children's stories Kornei Chukovsky, who had been an intimate of her grandfa-ther. He wanted her to handle the ther. He wanted her to handle the publication in the West of his book, "The First Circle," as part of his campaign against the Soviet establishment. He spoke of it as a war, spoke "of salvos and explosions." "The First Circle," he said, was "a big book — my life." ". It will have to be done in absolute secrecy. You can imagine what would hap-pen to me if you were found out." Her account is gripping reading until it reaches the inevitable end, the breakdown in communications, the recriminations. But even there the reader will be engaged by the metamorphosis of Solzhenitsyn,

The diagramed deal displays ma-ture match-point judgment. East opened with one club, and was encouraged to hear his partner bid hearts after a one-spade overcall. North should oow have jumped to three spades, which would probably have ended the auction for a score of 140.

The supercautious raise to two spades gave East-West a better chance to compete effectively. If South had passed, West would have tried three clubs, but as it was he was forced to pass when South bid three spades, a good attempt at ob-struction that almost succeeded. East judged well in bidding four mond ten clubs in the face of a heart missit. 10th trick.

His partner was unlikely to have more than a doubleton spade in the light of the opposition bidding, so he rated to have a few clobs. South persevered unilaterally to four spades, a move that was right in practice, though distinctly dubi-ous in theory. This was promptly doubled by West, and defeated by one trick when the defense took two heart winners, a heart ruff and the spade ace.

East-West scored 114 match points out of a possible 142, for a score of 100 points. They would have scored about half that oumber if they had permitted South to play three spades, but would have done even better if they had been allowed to play four clubs. That contract would have been unbeatable. If the defense begins with two dision. glowering and sermond Perhaps, as Mrs. Carliste sugarthis is a Russian tradition of we such as Gogol. Observers also wondered if Martin had some motive in making his remarks, perhaps a desire to have Steinbrenner fire him for reasons known unly to Martin. This is the second year of the manager's threeyear contract.

Connors Wins in Washington

By Barry Lorge WASHINGTON, July 24 (WP) - Except for one man and one match - Bjorn Borg in the Wimhledon final two weeks ago - it has heen a perfect summer for Jimmy Connors. The 25-year-old left-bander vesterday won the Washington Star International tennis championship for the second time, beating Eddie Dihbs, 7-5, 7-5, in a match that lasted 2 hours, 5 minutes in saunabath heat at the Washington Tennis

"It was pretty hrutal out there." Connors said of the 108-degree heat and oppressive humidity. "It wasn't so much the sun beating down as the humidity. You start sweating real quick. That's why I took a lot of breaks between points to towel off and give both of us a couple of seconds to rest."

24th Triumph

This was Connors' 24th victory in 25 matches since mononucleosis sidelined him for seven weeks this

The one loss, of course, came in the match Connors wanted most to win: the Wimbledon final in which

Borg routed him, 6-2, 6-2, 6-3. Connors has since embarked on a crusade to reduce the gap that has grown this year between him and Borg, now the indisputable No. 1 player in the world.

It was a hruising match, hut Connors won a unanimous decision for being more aggressive. As in earlier matches, he did not follow his serve to the net. But he slugged his way in much more frequently than Dibbs did, jumping on short balls, whacking them deep, flying in behind the considerable momentum of his follow-through. Forehand Uneven

Connors often forehand was shaky early in the match, hut later it was as solid as Gibraltar. Time and again he thumped firm fore-hands down the line and came steaming in behind them, either forcing errors or slashing away killer volleys.

"I was trying to get to the net every time he hit a short hall," said Connors, who mixed up his game well to dictate the pattern of play. until he hit a short one . . . I players.

He was sure of his call. At 30-30, Connors got in behind a flashing forehand cross-court approach, but netted a forehand volley from in close, one of the few he mulfed. And then, startingly, he delivered a third double fault to lose his serve.

Connors collected himself nicely and broke Dibbs from 40-15 in the 11th game, as he had after losing a break in the first set.

On his fifth game point, Dihbs netted a backhand - usually his stronger side, but the one that let bim down most yesterday. Then he netted a forehand off a service

On the third break point, Connors picked out a short ball and blasted a forehand approach. He was ready and waiting at the net and slammed away a high, decisive-ly angled backhand volley, killing it with the two-fisted clout of a lumberjack wielding an axe.

Egypt Boycotts 5 Nations' Play

CAIRO, July 24 (AP) - Egypt will boycott all sports competitions that may be held in Libya, Algeria Syria, Iraq or South Yemen and will not invite teams from these countries to play on Egyptian soil.

The decision yesterday was in retaliation for a violent brawl between Egyptian and Libyan soccer players Saturday during the Afri-can Games in Algeria and it was an indication that the Egyptians believe their players were attacked for political reasons, specifically opposition to President Anwar Sadat's peace overtures to Israel.

Egypt accused the Lihyans of at-tacking its players, charged the Al-"I hit a lot of looping balls to gerian police of joining the Libyans change the pace, then I'd punish and hlamed the Algerian government for failing to protect Egyptian

A Suburban Vatican of the Evangelicals

By George Vescey

WHEATON, fil. (NYT) — Just as country musicians flock to Nashville's Music Row and Manbattan's Madison Avenue is synonymous with the advertising industry, so this pleasant Chicago suburb is gaining a reputation as the Vaocan of Evaogelicais.

At least 30 evangelical organizations now have main offices either in Wheaton or the industrial park at Carol Stream, tak-ing advantage of the talent pool from Wheatoo College and the resources all around them.

Their presence is oot apparent when the visitor arrives from the Illinois flatlands: oo crosses oo the skyline, oo biliboards pro-claiming this "Evangelical City," as other towns brag of being the feed capital or the tractor capital of the Middle West. But execu-tives say the quiet presence of other evangelical companies is beneficial.

"The other day I wanted to find out bow many missionaries there are in the world," said Robert Walker, head of Chris-oan Life Publishers. "All f had to do was make a 10-cent phooe call to Jack Frizeen at the International Foreign Missioo Associadon, but I could have walked 200 yards and talked to him in

50 Million

With as many as 50 million evangelicals all over the United States, Wheaton can bardly boast of housing the majority of evangelical organizations. But it does probably have the nation's largest cluster of evangelica groups.

Business must be good, judging by the corporate headquarters in the "Christian Gbetto" in Carol Stream — Christian Life. Christianity Today, National Association of Evangelicals. Medical Assistance Program, Tyndale House Publishers. Youth for Christ International, Chapel of the Air, Hope Publishing and the Evangelical Alliance Mission, backing on each other, some on land that was made

The Reasons

Most of the religion compa-nies have located in Wheaton for the same reasons corporations have moved to Fairfield County. Conn., or Orange County, Calif.

The most important newcomer in recent years was Christianity Today, a conservative weekly that had been based in Washiogton. When executives decided to move here in 1977. there was some talk of getting out of the amoral urban setting into the real America. Some of its employees, evangelicals all. chose not to move.

"The decision to relocate seems to reverse the ideal of evangelical penetration of secular society that motivated the founders of the magazine," said Carl F. Henry, a former editor of the magazine.

Just Begun

Most people, however, think that Wheaton has just begun to blossom as an evangelical cen-ter; they expect other companies to be attracted by the $15.5-million Billy Graham Center being constructed oo the fringe of his alma mater. The center can only enhance the college's reputation for turning out devout, well-educated evangelicals, who fit easily into publishing, missionary and chorch work.

"Wheaton students are more likely to be working with the disadvantaged than passing out tracts down at the railroad station A few residents complain about tax money being used for the arrows that point to the 30 churches in Wheaton, and some believe that the Fellowship of Christian Athletes is a little too noticeable in the public schools. But most call it a tremendous advantage to live in a college town where many graduates each year will be able to find jobs and remain in a setting they like. And most agree that old divisions between evangelical values and those of other residents are being blurred.

There may have been two towns of Wheaton 20 years ago," says Rosemary Ziska, the director of the Chamber of Commerce, "But people overlap more now.
